THE EXOTIC OF A PEACOCK

By Anant Kumar Sharma, 4th C

The peacock, or male peafowl, is known in many lands as one of the most beautiful and exotic of all birds. Its train of long, shiny blue, green, and brown tail feathers can reach lengths of up to six feet. Its chest feathers startle the eye with their unusual, metallic shade of blue. Originally native to India, Sri Lanka, and Java, the bird is now found in zoos and gardens throughout the world. Traders brought this magnificent bird to the lands surrounding the Mediterranean Sea during ancient times.

The ancient Romans adopted the bird as a symbol of the immortality bestowed upon the empress after her death. The early Christians in their turn viewed the peacock as a symbol of the resurrection of Christ as well as the immortality of his followers.

A FATHER LIKE YOU

By- Navrup Kaur, 10th A

A father like you is a dream come true,
I thank God that he chose me to come to you.
Someone who is thoughtful and kind
And my silly mistakes who wouldn't mind
Someone who doesn't care if I sing off tune
But still loving me all the way up to the moon
Teaching us gently, right from wrong
The sweetest father a child could get
To me, you are the greatest man I have ever met.

THE MACHINE WARRIORS

By- Kanksha Vanjare, 11th A

The Machine Warriors - Need of AI during the pandemic The coronavirus pandemic has shaken the world. The entire world is in action to fight against the COVID-19 virus, by standing strong and staying in their homes. The use of AI in this time is quite impressive. The ability of AI-based programs and machines to think for themselves without being vulnerable to the virus is being explicitly used. The Chinese government has been using drones equipped with thermal sensors to find sick people walking around in public places. This helps identify people who should not be out. Drones are also being used to detect places where too many people are breaking the ongoing lockdown. Did you know, in some places drones are used for sprinkling disinfectants? AI is proving to be more useful now than ever when AI-based robots are being used to go near the infected patients to give them food and medicines, which do not require human doctors' assistance. The wards for the patients are cleaned using robots. AI-based programs are used to study the pattern of the virus, infection rate, and estimate the future spread and deaths which will be caused, caused, this is helping us understand the virus better. Some AI-based models are used for studying the virus and comparing it to the previous versions of Corona virus like SARS and others. Models are also being used to find a suitable medicine or vaccine. The Arogya Setu application developed by the government of India also has an AI-powered Chatbot which could tell us our chances of being infected based on the data which we give to it. Technology and Artificial Intelligence are fighting corona with the entire human race. They are protecting us and helping humanity. Their contribution may not be recognized but this would lead to a new emergence for AI in the healthcare sector.

AI is becoming a big part of everyone's life, how do you think it will effect us in the future?

THE TWIN STRANGER

By - Yashita Khajekar, 9th B

Imagine how surreal it would be to meet someone that looked exactly like you. Niamh Geaney, a 26 year old from Kerry, Ireland, set out to do just that. Using social media, she's received hundreds of submissions from around the world, and found an uncanny match in just two weeks and she's still looking! Niamh has found two more Twin Strangers since and, through her website.

First, Niamh found Karen, who lives just an hour away in Louth, Ireland. Niamh's second twin stranger was Luisa from Genoa, Italy. When she met with Luisa's family and friends to get a feel for what she was like, Luisa's mother thought Niamh was her daughter from a distance.

When she met with Luisa's family and friends to get a feel for what she was like, Luisa's mother thought Niamh was her daughter from a distance. Irene from Sligo, Ireland, was Niamh's third match. Niamh and I thought I would be fine meeting Karen until I knew I was about ten minutes away.

I was getting ridiculously nervous wondering how I would react for the person as same face as mine. For the entire duration of our encounter I literally stared at her" Some even believe that strangers could have nearly identical DNA, like twins from birth. In depth, research has not been completed on the topic. But most experts agree that it is possible that everyone has a doppelgänger, maybe even more than one.

ललकार

By - Sonal Mishra, Teacher

जब भी खुद को ललकारा है, हमने खुद को और सँवारा है। जब बाधाएँ यक्ष बनी, उन्हें सुरसा रूप दिखाया है। जब तम का सागर लहराया, आशा को किरण बनाया है। जब भी सिमटी सीमाएँ, हमने पारावार बढ़ाया है। मिट्टी हो या हो चंदन, मस्तक पर उसे सजाया है। जब दुविधा कोई विशाल बनी, हमने परचम लहराया है। जब मान-अपमान प्रश्न बना, हमने खुद को रजकण पाया है। जब अपना कोई शत्रु बना, हमने हँसकर गले लगाया है। जब अस्तित्व संघर्ष बना, हमने मुक्तिबोध जगाया है। जब प्रीत की रीत की बात चली, हमने सर्वस्व लुटाया है।

SENIOR YEAR

By - Nishtha Mathur, 10 th B

2022: Senior year School teaches us lessons. School builds our Character. School gives us friends. School prepares us for the future. But most significantly my school gave me memories and stories. Stories that I won't forget all my life, stories that will always keep encouraging me through ups and downs, that keep the zeal in me burning, stories that heal me from my mental stress, that make me giggle when I'm sad, stories that give me company when I am alone, these stories stand alone as full-length drama films. And I'm grateful to say that I made several amazing ones this year. But these stories are incomplete without my teachers and friends. All the teachers had been so helpful all year; it's not just the support we required but also credit of the fact that we have enough daring to carry out the mischief we did. Our teachers were like angels who protected us from getting into trouble even when we troubled them the most. If only I could give this year one word I'd say: ROLLERCOASTER. There were good and bad times, but my companions were there by my side all along. Have a look back to the first day of grade 10th. When the girls sitting on one side of the class and the boys on the other. Never thought we'd become inseparable by the end of year. My class, 10B, was like a team, a team with unity, strength, and friendship. And the bonds we made here will be missed the most! So, "Thank you, NHSS" for giving me amazing teachers and friends and teaching me lessons I'll never forget. New years' may come and go, but "2022" is and always will be the best year of my life.

DOWN MEMORY LANE

By - Pradipta Koli, X - F

Down the memory lane.... This was the place where I entered crying and exited weeping, But there were countless laughter's, fights, sharing and caring in between. That was my desk and there my best friend used to sit, But there was a whole row of all my other beloved friends in between. Here we learned our lessons, there our teacher stood, But there was colossal river of knowledge flowing in between. Now I have moved away from School, ahead on the Highway of my life. But I will always pass through the memory lane named 'School', in between.

2022 A LEARNING EXPERIENCE

2022 a year of learning and self-realization, year 2020 when I got admitted in NHSS I was quite excited but Covid 19 pushed us in a shell of lockdown. 2022 after long 2 years finally I entered in my new school with some known and some unknown faces. This year, I got a ray of light towards my career path with help of my teachers and parents. With friends, taking trips and picnics made us more connected and bonded. 2022, Love for music definitely grew, with new passion for learning guitar which gives me happiness. Looking forward for 2023 learnings!!

THE BEAUTY OF TENDERNESS

By- Shreya sinha, 12 th E

I was swaying my feet and screaming out loud while listening to Taylor Swift. And then I saw this girl in the mirror who was smiling and laughing and dancing but knew it was to distract her from a few things she was avoiding. Things that upset her, things that she sometimes hides, things that sometimes make her feel insecure, things that bring back some memories, and things that make her feel downhearted and delightful simultaneously. She then remembers how swiftly and gracefully she overcame all those waves. And then all she could feel was Self Contentment. But she couldn't help but wonder Are there any people who actually want to know people? Are people out there in the world really have the curiosity to know the real version of the people and not the one they try to showcase? Are people really able to vent out? Are they mentally fine or are they just pretending like always? I wonder in what things they find comfort. Being human, we should find comfort in the other human being. But it's not the case, some people find comfort in movies or songs or dancing or traveling. If you speak of me, I find comfort in music, books and the night sky, especially and of course 'The Moon'. When you notice, it's quite sad that people find comfort in everything other than humans. Sometimes, We are so lost in the struggle of being understood that we forget we are also the one who has to understand others. You see, 'Eye Contact' is considered a form that has the most influence on others.

You can comfort people and with those same pair of eyes, you can also creep the hell out of them. It's upon you to decide. As to speak of my opinion, I think Eye contact is the most beautiful way to express your emotions. One eye contact can send shivers down your spine. Eyes reveal more stories than a tongue can ever express. They have all the stories buried in them and just by looking deeper, you can uncover them. Yet we use them to judge people's bodies and their outer appearance without ever peeping into their souls. And similarly, when you think of the moon, it just sits there all alone absorbing all kinds of memories and stories. There are millions of people who are under the same moon but some are struggling and crying, some are happy and dancing, some are totally fully consumed by love, some are in their darkest times and some are just staring at the same moon while romanticizing its beauty and capturing it forever in their captivating and dreamy eyes. Try listening and comforting people. Give it a go sometimes! It will mean a lot to them!

IMAGINATION

By- Shreya sinha, 12 th E

Yesterday, I was just chilling and my eyes fell on one of the paintings that was just hung there and I thought to myself what was the painter thinking while painting the two elephants that were walking in a queue with the littlest elephant behind them trying to catch up with them, they all were walking on a trunk.

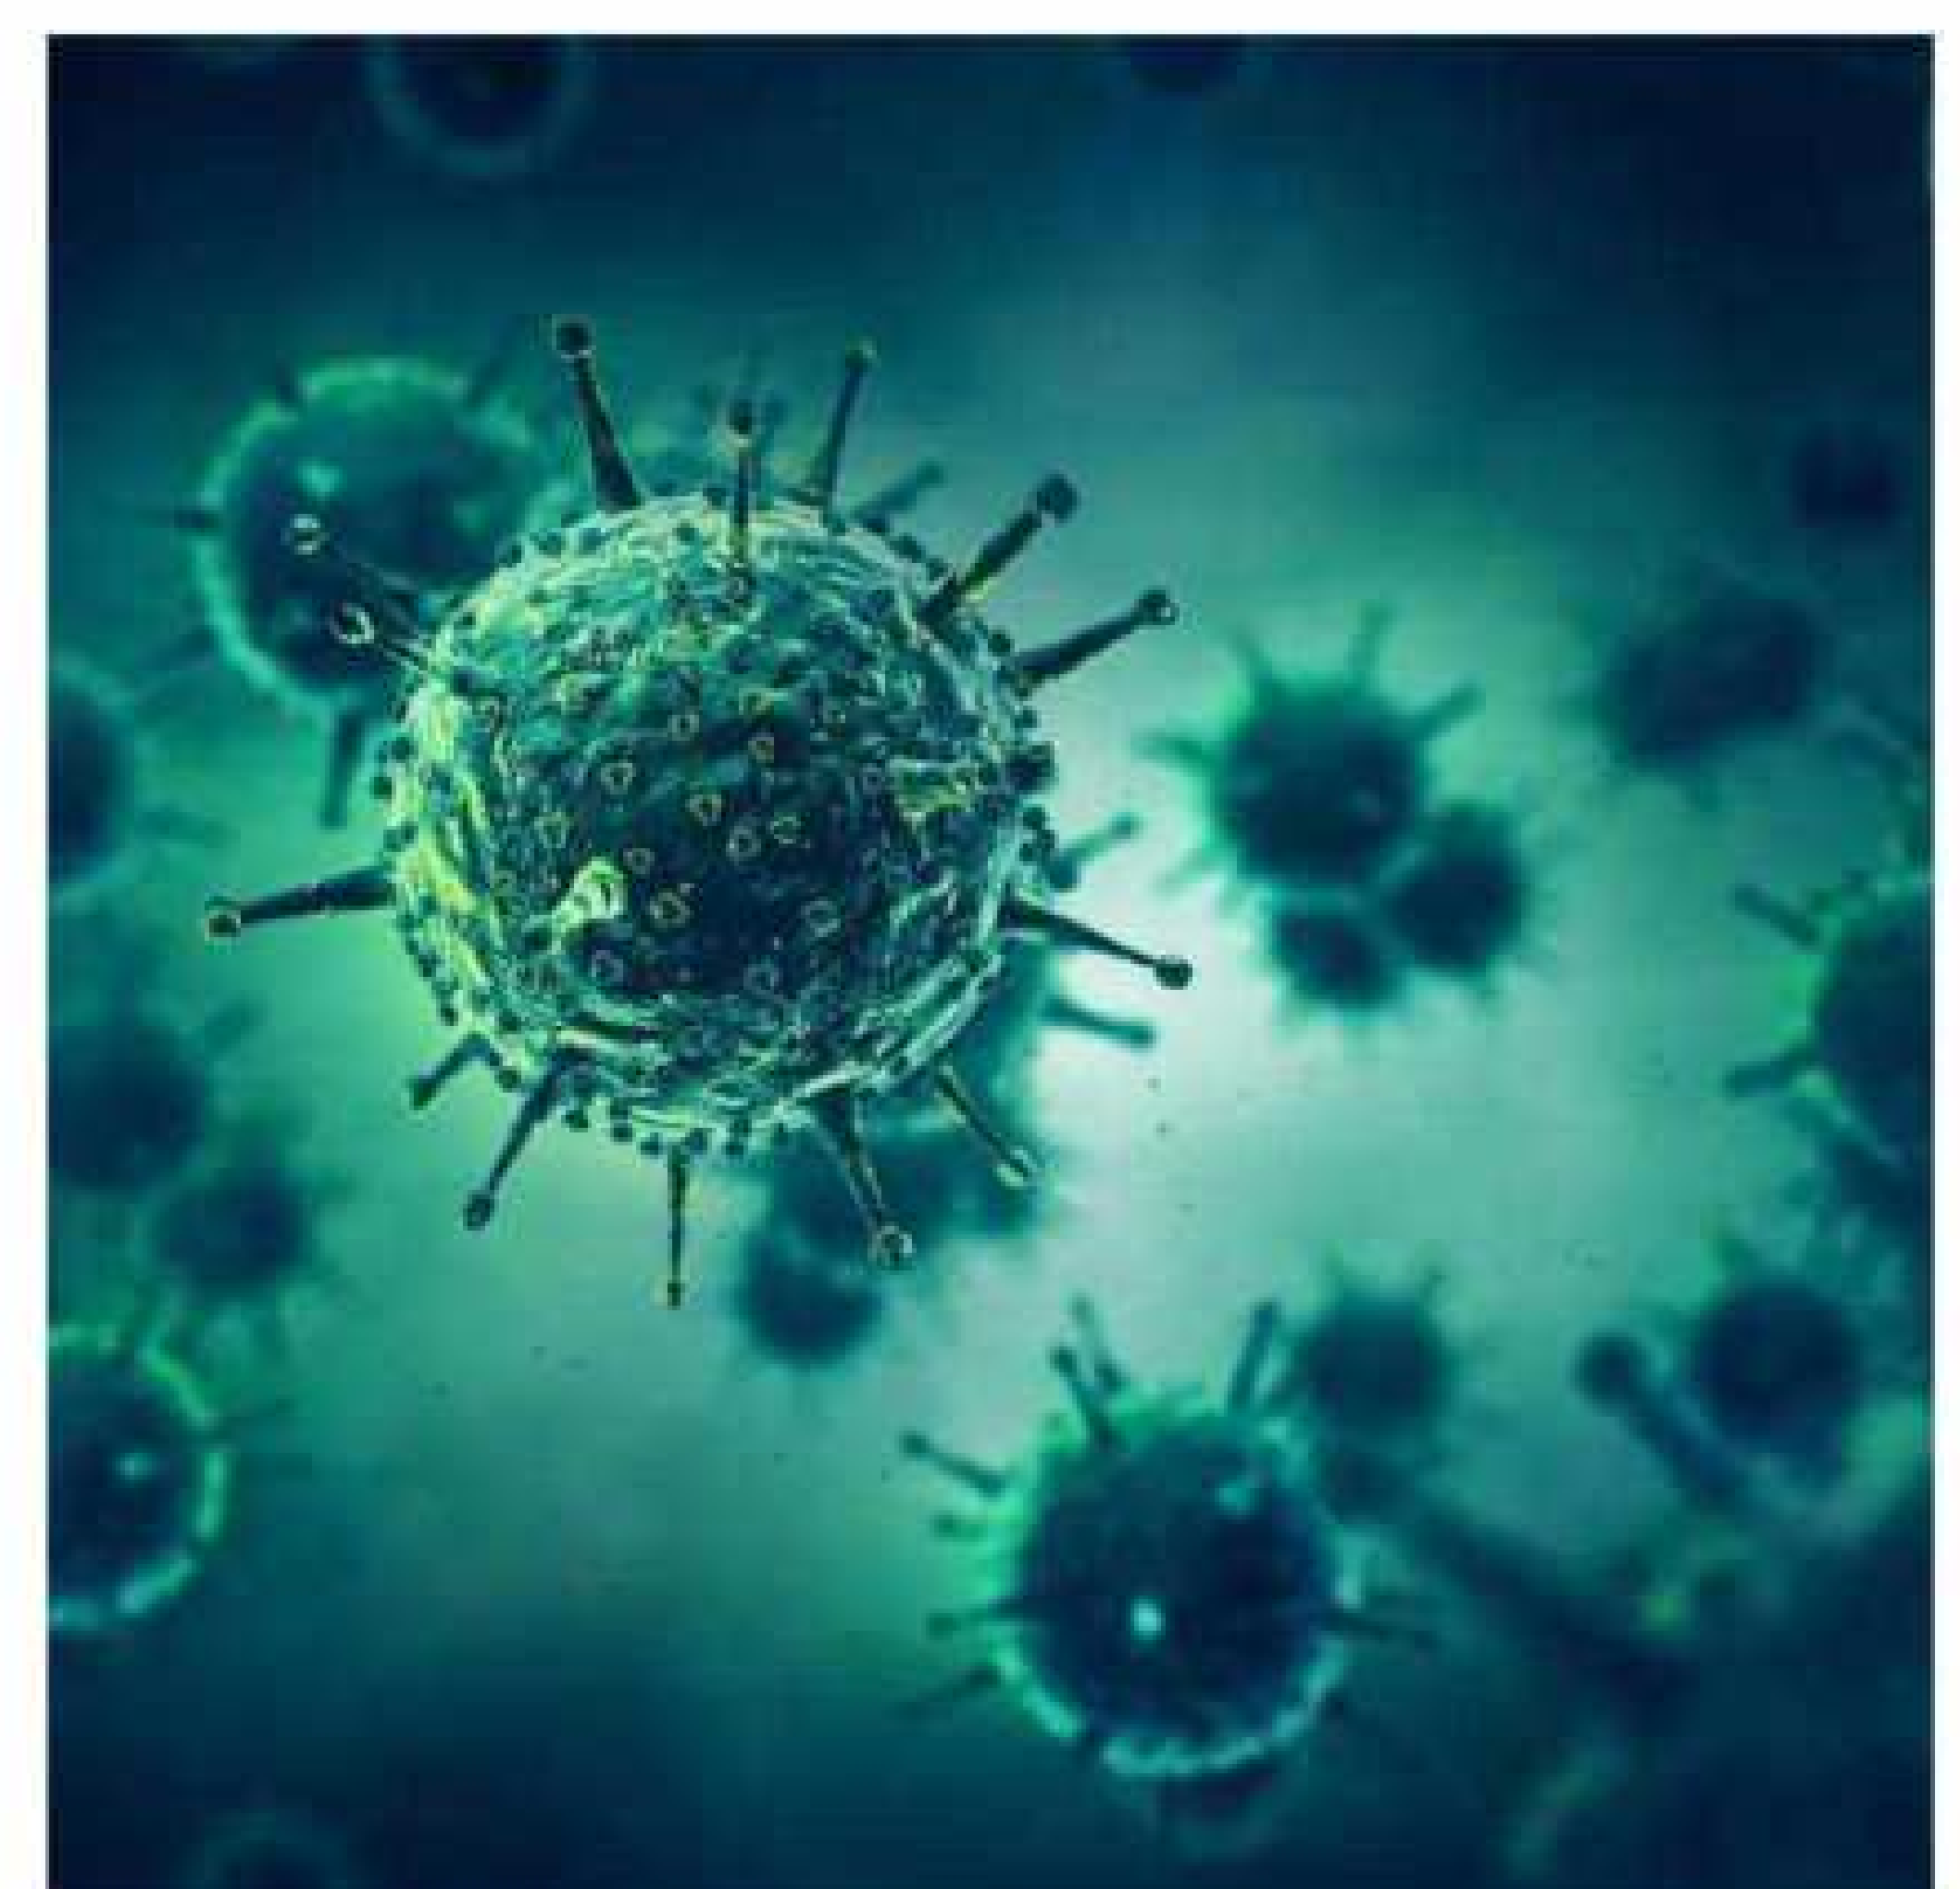

The irony used by the painter, he wanted to convey something. And that was when I realized the power of imagination. I could build up a story about the painting while the painter might have thought about something else. All creatures on this planet have different perspectives. But we, humans, have the power to also view things from others' perspectives.

We usually don't realize the power and worth of imagination. Being imaginative brings colors to your life (not literally). We start to look at ourselves and the world with a different perspective or you can say with a different mind. Being imaginative never means that you are not living in the real world. It means you give meaning to things that once you felt were useless. It means to live in a world and appreciate all the different stories told by different people. It means remaining creative even when you are old. It means to live all the small moments in your life and enjoy the hell out of it. It means to think from such a level that others think is impossible. It means to think that has never been thought. This is the Power of Imagination. It can change your life if you let yourself observe and think. Let yourself be free and don't restrict your thoughts by your insecurities or because of self-doubt. Imagination can change your life in ways you have never thought. So now, Think and Imagine.

THAT MOMENT

By- Akshay Malhan, 12 th A

The moment his eyes found hers, They knew they carried the curse, The horrible old disease, they were lovers Hidden from the sun, as their hands met Her breath quickened, she knew she was stricken Yet she stood on her toes and did something she hoped not to regret She tasted laughter, happiness, mint and lemon This was as good as it gets, this side of heaven She had smiled, and he was mesmerized She had stolen his heart and thoughts in an intimate heist He was infatuated by her very presence He saw those doe eyes, bright as neon fireflies And her breath was cinnamon, wrapped in innocence He knew he would protect this wildflower Every second, every hour As long as their eyes locked, there was no future, no past, Lost to the sands of time, free at last.
